Chapter 1 by Kaitlin

"Anna..." she says my name as though she is trying it on for size. Her eyes flicker back to me and we lock eyes. My mind stirs. "Is that short for anything?"

I shake myself out of the daze that is staring at her and gather my words.

"Andromeda."

She smiles.

"Like the galaxy."

"I suppose..." I mumble and I feel my cheeks turning red.

And from that first encounter I learn my first three basic but vital pieces of information about Natania.

1. Her eyes are an unfamiliar yet comforting shade of grey-blue.

2. She likes astrology and everything that lies within.

3. She looks really good in yellow.

It is the third observation that brings me back to Natania. While we drifted off to our respective cups of coffee in our respective corners of the tiny café, it's the flick of a yellow sleeve that catches my eye as she flashes a cheesy "call me" sign from across the room. She motions to my own cup, and it I learn two more things about Natania.

4. While I was distracted by the way she pronounced my name, she had scribbled something on to the lid of my green tea.

5. Her number is 614-785-0012

6. She is sneaker than I would have guessed for a girl in a yellow dress.
